Guard members respond to decision allowing women in combat

By Lori Kersey
Staff writer

Sgt. Sara Yoke was part of a humanitarian mission to a remote village in Afghanistan with the West Virginia Army National Guard when she and her fellow soldiers came under fire.

She was alongside a special operations troop bringing blankets and other winter supplies to villagers.

Yoke, a member of a public affairs unit, was covering the story as a journalist.

When the mission turned into a 45-minute gun battle, Yoke, her commander Lt. Todd Harrell and others took cover in front of the truck that had carried the supplies.

And Yoke kept working. "I was incredibly impressed with her professionalism," Harrell said of Yoke. "She continued to do her job. She was calm and cool — I mean she was phenomenal."

Sgt. Sara Yoke, a member of a public affairs unit with the West Virginia Army National Guard, is pictured with a dog during her deployment in Afghanistan. Yoke earned a Bronze Star and a Combat Action Badge for her service there.

Yoke, now a 26-year-old living in Charleston, earned a Bronze Star and a Combat Action Badge.

As a woman, she is not allowed in a special forces unit like the one whose story she covered. But that's about to change.

Last week, U.S. Defense Secretary Leon Panetta announced plans to allow women into combat roles that were previously closed to them.

Women have been close to the front lines in Iraq and Afghanistan for a decade now. Lifting the ban on women means that now they'll be al-

Gas drilling royalties transform lives of a lucky few

By Kevin Begos
The Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — Private landowners are reaping billions of dollars in royalties each year from the boom in natural gas drilling, transforming lives and livelihoods even as the windfall provides only a modest boost to the broader economy.

In Pennsylvania alone, royalty payments could top $1.2 billion for 2012, according to an Associated Press analysis that looked at state tax information, production records and estimates from the National Association of Royalty Owners.

For some landowners, the unexpected royalties have made a big difference.

"We used to have to put stuff on credit cards. It was basically living from paycheck to paycheck," said Shawn Georgetti, who runs a family dairy farm in Avella, about 30 miles southwest of Pittsburgh.

Natural gas production has boomed in many states over the past few years as advances in drilling opened up vast reserves buried in deep shale rock, such as the Marcellus formation in Pennsylvania and the Barnett in Texas.

Nationwide, the royalty owners association estimates, natural gas royalties totaled $21 billion in 2010, the most recent year for which it has done a full

More pier art planned for Virginia Street

By Jim Balow
Staff writer

Hours after artists who painted murals on Interstate 64 bridge columns last summer were honored by City Council, organizers were making plans for a third round of the Peer to Pier project.

This year they're targeting the 12 piers along Virginia Street — six on each side of the road — beneath I-64 near Pennsylvania Avenue.

"It's time to get a round started for 2013," Lori Brannon told members of the Strong Neighborhood Task Force on Wednesday.

Brannon, a neighborhood planner in the city's Planning Department, convinced task force members to start the pier project two years ago after seeing similar murals in the Tremé neighborhood of New Orleans.

In 2011, artists painted murals on 10 piers beneath I-64 along Washington Street, five on each side of the street. Last summer they painted another 10 piers on the north side of Kanawha Boulevard.

While the task force hopes to tackle all the cross streets from Washington to the river, Virginia Street rose to the top this year.

"One reason Virginia Street is good," City Councilwoman Mary Jean Davis said, "Virginia Street directs you to the Civic Center, so it's going to get a lot of visibility."

"One thing that impresses me is you need to stop to appreciate the murals," she said. "On Washington Street, I saw a class group walk around each of the piers and look at them."

Fundraising for this year is already underway, Brannon said. Davis has secured a promise of $10,000 of city funds, which would need City Council approval, she said.

"I talked to [FestivALL Director] Larry Groce. They're going to ask the Greater Kanawha Valley Foundation for funding again. That gets us to $20,000." FestivALL organizers provided $10,000 for the murals in each of the first two years as part of their support of public art.

Organizers of the Peer to Pier project have targeted 12 columns flanking Virginia Street for the third round of Interstate 64 murals. However the piers on the south side of Virginia, between eastbound Virginia Street and an approach to the I-64 ramp (foreground) have little room for artists to work safely.

"And too, it's more issues than just the strength or the mental stamina. You're living with males and females in a high-level stress situation."

"Sometimes it's not a great idea."

Hall isn't the first to voice the opinion that men and women being in close contact while on special missions could add undue stress.

First Lt. Courtney Pierson, 15-year member of the West Virginia National Guard, doesn't think that would be a problem.

She hasn't served in Afghanistan or Iraq, but at times has been the only female while training for a mission in the United States.

"If you make it an issue, it will be an issue," Pierson said. "... If you can't work together and the mission isn't your focus, it's not going to work out real well."

Hall, who was part of a medical unit in Afghanistan, argued that allowing women into the new roles should be decided on a case-by-case basis.

Among her concerns is safety, she said.

"If there's someone having to look out for you instead of doing their job, then yeah, that's an issue," Hall said.

"Usually males try to look out for the females. I know that sounds chauvinistic, but it is what it is."

Sgt. Sara Yoke, 26, of Charleston, shows pictures on her camera to Afghan children during her deployment.

It will require a change in military culture, Yoke said.

"I don't want to say [the military is] chauvinistic but it might take 20 years for this to happen and the culture to change," she said.

As a woman among male soldiers, she had mixed experiences, she said.

She earned respect from some by being good at her job. Others sexually harassed her, she said. Sometimes men were hesitant to associate with her for fear something they said could be taken a wrong way, Yoke said.

"I just think that just because the ban was lifted doesn't mean

The mural project will cost more this year, Brannon said, because there are two more piers than in past years. That adds $4,000 to the budget. And the task force needs at least $3,000 to rent scaffolding and pay for clear coating the finished murals.

Assistant Mayor Rod Blackstone said he's got some ideas on how to raise the missing $7,000.

"One is the West Virginia sesquicentennial. We can tie this to the sesquicentennial: June 20 is one day before FestivALL starts."

"I've also talked to people at the state level," he said. "If we do this project at the state level as a West Virginia project, we stand a good chance of getting funding from the state. If we make this a statewide initiative, try to engage artists across the state, we could get up to $30,000."

"And there is a private enterprise who has expressed interest in helping out," Blackstone said. "It looks optimistic."

Painting of some of the piers could cause safety problems because the columns stand close to traffic lanes, Brannon said. Similar problems last summer forced the city's Traffic Engineering Department to devise a safety plan involving company has paid "well over" $1 billion to Pennsylvania landowners, with most of that coming since 2008.

One economist noted that the windfall payments from the natural gas boom are wonderful for individuals, but that they represent just a tiny portion of total economic activity.

For example, the $1 billion for Pennsylvania landowners sounds like a lot, but "it's just not going to have a big impact on the overall vitality of the overall economy," said Robert Inman, a professor of economics and public policy at the University of Pennsylvania's Wharton business school. "I think the issue is, what difference does it make for the individual families?"

Pennsylvania's total gross domestic product in 2011 was about $500 billion, according to in 2010 to about $3 in 2012. For many leaseholders, that meant a decline in royalties.

The boom in natural gas royalties has even led to niche spin-off companies that look for lease heirs who don't even know they're owed money.

Michael Zwick is president of Assets International, a Michigan company that searches for missing heirs.

"It was an underserved niche," Zwick said of oil and gas leases. When a company can't find an heir to lease royalties, the money often goes to state unclaimed property funds.

Zwick said he has found a few dozen people whose gas lease money was being held in escrow, including one who was owed about $250,000 in drilling royalties. But the average amount, he said, is far lower.

ANNUAL STAFF
1968

FAREWELL TO MARLINTON HIGH SCHOOL

Maybe it wasn't the best or the newest school building in the state but it was a GOOD school—filled with the memories of many generations of students. And when it burned it was as if a part of the heart of our community smoldered also.

So it is with deep sorrow that we bid farewell to Marlinton High School as it once was, while keeping present in our minds the thought that a school is not merely the building; but it is the people who work, loaf, laugh, and cry there. Even though the building may be gutted, empty, and practically nonexistent, the spirit of Marlinton High School will live on and on.

FOREWORD

With much indecision as to how to present the High School life of 1967-68, we embarked upon our course last fall. After surmounting the usual trials and pit-falls we have amassed the information contained herein and present it as your memories of this year.

It is our earnest desire that in years to come this book will carry you back to the good old days—your happy, carefree days of 1968. If, in the future, the 1968 MARLINTONIAN does that, we will feel that our time has been well spent.

It is with this thought in mind that once again we present for you THE MARLINTONIAN. May you cherish it as a true friend.

Third Row: Raymond Pryor, Kent Galford, Jr., Louis Watson, Bob Barlow, Ed Stemple, George Broce, Jr., Steve Jack, Kenneth Faulknier.

TO THOSE WHO SERVED SO WELL . . .

. . . the senior class of Marlinton High School proudly dedicates this, THE 1968 MARLINTONIAN, to the members of the Marlinton Volunteer Fire Department for their never-ending service to our community and to our school in particular.

The Fire Department, which includes many businessmen and High school students, worked around the clock during the huge spring flood, evacuating people from their homes and cleaning up the town afterwards. The Fire Department also worked continuously limiting the three devastating school fires this year and saving many school articles and supplies.

The students of the Marlinton Junior and Senior High Schools are indebted to the Fire Department for their efforts to help us and the Senior Class of 1968 are gratified that a part of "Old Marlinton High" is still standing. Once again, we say "thank-you!.. to the Marlinton Volunteer Fire Department.

Dear Seniors:

You are passing through the end of an era with Marlinton High School, an era that started fifty years ago when I, as an eighth grader, passed through the doors of a new Marlinton High School. Few today can know what pride we felt as we entered our magnificent new building. Today I witnessed the tearing down of this same building. It is a sad time for you and me. No one knows what is ahead for us and our M.H.S. The only thing we can do is look ahead with faith and courage. I envision for you a new and brighter horizon. Prepare yourselves to meet it, chin up, and with the will and determination to make the best of your new experience. I have great pride in you. All that I ask is DO NOT LET Marlinton High School DOWN.

MARLINTON BOYS DO DEER HUNTING

MARLINTON — "I let the boys go deer hunting," principal Henry A. Yeager said Monday, "as a winning the Class A championship."

Yeager added that everything was back to normal in the heart of the deer country "after we celebrated Saturday night."

When the bus arrived from Weston where the Marlinton Copperheads won the Class A championship, it stopped across the river. The Marlinton Copperheads kept their unbeaten record in tact here Friday night with an 18-0 triumph over Meadow Bridge, one of the top single A contenders in the state.

Marlinton Wins Unbeaten Record

MEADOW BRIDGE — The Marlinton Copperheads kept their unbeaten record in tact here Friday night with an 18-0 triumph over Meadow Bridge, one of the top single A contenders in the state.

The winners were led by the running of Harry McCloud and Ivan Withers, but had to fight hard to over come the determined Wildcats. Larry Farley accounted for Meadow Bridge's only score with a charge from the three yard line in the final quarter.

McCloud gave the victors a 6-0 halftime lead and Withers broke through the Meadow Bridge defense for a touchdown.

Marlinton Team Tops Frankford

In the second quarter, Frankford scored again on a two yard play by Hefner but the extra failed. The Pirates took lead on this touchdown to 2-7.

CONFLAGRATION

The year of 1967 will be long remembered by the students of Marlinton High. As you can see in the picture at the left of the page our Junior High was burned in June and one month later caught fire again. This building was the newest school building in Pocahontas County. This building was occupied by the 7th and 8th graders, Vo.-Ag. Students, The Board of Education, and also served as a garage for the school buses.

As a result of this fire the Board of Education had to purchase three Mobile School Units to be used as classrooms for the Junior High students.

At the right of the page are pictures taken after the fire inside the high school building. The top picture is of the Bookkeeping room beside the auditorium. The lower picture is of the stairway that leads to the auditorium. Note roof hanging over the stairs.

FAREWELL

Four years is a long time
—too long to forget.
We look around and ask
—where did it go?
We worked, we played
—but for four years?
Then we look the other way
—into tomorrow.
Suddenly we're not so tall
as we thought we were
And not so smart.

But we find that somehow
We learned a decisive lesson at Mission:
something we wouldn't have had without the Priests and Sisters, without God or religion
—a direction into that uncertain tomorrow.
It can never be so dark again
Though the world may change and the times change and we change.

Barb,

I really don't know how to begin or what to say. But the main thing is to thank you for being a swell companion for the past four years. We've had some great times and I certainly hope that graduation won't break up our little trio — You, Lana Kaye, & Me... The Good, The Bad, & The Ugly.

You seem disappointed about not going to school but remember that college is made up of people who follow the crowd. You still have a chance to do something different and show the crowd later. Take that chance & make the most of it. I know that you can & will.

May God Bless & Keep You
A friend always
Sally
